Write your essay here

I think this activity was helpful to not just know about our classmate, but also learn something about ourselves. It makes us question things about us and find things we like or not about ourselves. This activity also teaches us things about each other, things we might not even think they will like or be like that. That we are more than what we see in the outside or “the first impression” people have of us. We are all complex and deep humans with different interests. The Funny guy is not just the funny guy he has dreams, big dreams that other people have no idea about. We all have a life that people have no idea about. We like things and hate others, we dream, we think deeply, and most of the time have no idea about this. Every single detail can tell you something important about someone or even how they do things, reveals things that if you do not pay attention close enough you will not notice. We all have things that will surprise others but are normal and probably essential for us. And is not until you put an effort learn about a person, what are their motivations and Idols or just their favorite color when some things start to make sense. You understand that person better and are more empathic towards them. You respect and tolerate your differences, and even admire or love their traits. I find all this fascinating and how some traits we have interfere or make a connection with the things we like or enjoy. We are so complex that not even us can comprehend ourselves. It is called being humans, exactly what makes us similar and makes us deserve unearned respect and tolerance regardless of how different we can get to be from each other, being able to live in society and live our lives in a better way requires these values a lot more. showing deep and genuine interest in others will also play a big part on this combined with respect and tolerance.

16. Define tolerance and respect in your own words.

1. accepting that everyone is different and not letting that stop you from sharing or communicating with them. When you tolerate someone does not mean you respect them or their ideas, but you still are not going to offend or affect them, their ideas, or interaction. You can tolerate someone and still you do not have to respect them or accept their ideas, what you accept is that they are human and that as humans we have differences that most times should not stop you from interacting unless it is damaging. We cannot all be the same, but we all come from the same place which makes us similar and deserves tolerance.
2. seeing or thinking of someone highly or recognizing their value of them as a person and their rights as a member of society

PART IV Family time (20pts)

Ask two persons from your family. You must have two different answers.

What is tolerance?
1. When someone likes something, I do not like, I tolerate them.
2. Respect the difference between people.

What is respect?
1. When I do not offend someone.
2. The deference you have to others

Why do you think these values are important in life?
1. It is important because I get teach that at school.
2. They are important because they help us live in society (in peace).

PART V (20pts)
